

Welcome to...

Wednesday, 13 September 2006

It is so comforting that the rumors of Regina's hospitality are fact, not fiction. The good old party line still hums with activity on our fair streets. Barely got a chance to get the Welcome mat on the front steps, and folks were stopping by.

While not one to hide the good silver when folks come to call, the right sociable thing to do was to make a little change and extend the functionality of IheartRegina.com a bit. You may have noticed that a 'comments' element has been added. Almost immediately, comments were posted.

While I love a good argument, the hopes are more serious debates will occur, my Canada includes Quebec, Gay marriage, and many other opinions that will eventually come forth. Your opinions matter too, that's why the comments functionality was added.

Click here to read more

{mosgoogle}

That fine young man Horseshit Jay left a lovely bon mot about 'Narrow Mindedness', 'Generational differences' and was wanting to place a bet that his work has seen a larger audience than mine. Well Jay, I hope that adding the comments area and giving voice to dissenting opinions shows that this web site is open to other ideas. Good ideas will always withstand reason, debate and furious discussion; weak ones will fall by the wayside. As for Generational differences, I like a good round in the mosh pit with the rest of them, but my differing opinions are not based on age or intellect, but on experience...try getting that without getting old! And as for whose thing is bigger when it comes to work exposure...its not about quantity, its about quality. I've worked for the Queen, five Prime Ministers, a few foreign heads of state, and many famous actors and musicians and have had my work translated into 10 different languages for the past 20 years...but if you want to compare Rolodexes or Linked In contacts, I think yours might come up a bit short.

Thundercakes wrote about fairness. Sorry Thundercakes, the issue is illegal signage. Its black and white. Billboards are legal, RWDSU's are illegal. ALL TAXPAYERS must obey the laws.

Euronymous must have been off the planet for a bit too long, as for the life of me I can't see how Regina sounds anything like Bicuspid.

Thank you one and all for coming by. Do pop in and see us again soon. The Welcome mat is officially out now.